Ossawatimie Brown.

The previous history of this hoary convict, if the truth could be made known, would scarcely recommend him to executive clemency; for his pathway in Kansas, as described to us by eye-witnesses, was one of burnings and butchery—charred ruins and the unburied bodies of murdered men indicated his presence as surely as similar remains did that of the remorseless savage to the pioneers of Kentucky. Solitary upon some ridge of the prairies the traveler might come upon a sheetless wagon, that ship of the plains, rifled of its contents and its cattle, and near by lay all that is left of the murdered teamster. Such are the campaigns that have fitted this old man for his late foray upon Harper's Ferry. Having long escaped the halter in a Territory without law, he has been emboldened by this success to attempt similar exploits in the State of Virginia; and now he lies a condemned felon at the mercy of his bitterest enemy.

We do not recall these events of Brown's previous life to steel Gov. Wise against the exercise of the prerogative of mercy; for there are many reasons why we think it expedient that his life should be spared. Not that we do not think he deserves it, if ever a traitor and a murderer and a robber did; but it would place the South upon a vantage ground in the eyes of the whole world; it would show that the spirit of Legree does not pervade our people; that, conscious of the rectitude and humanity of our institutions, we can afford to be magnanimous to the very Barabbas of our enemies. He is not only a spy, which is the vilest subject upon which to display the chivalric sentiment of the South.

The miserable old man has been denied by his Republican friends, and even as Peter did his Lord, they have thrice, yea, many times, and with cursing and swearing, have declared they "know not the man." They are even attempting to precipitate his fate, and render his execution doubly certain, by their denunciations of Governor Wise; for they believe that such a course toward a man of his peculiar idiosyncrasy would lash him to rage, and with the sagacity of the accomplished metador, they attempt to blind him to the advantage a martyr's death would bring to them. The more honest of them are already seeking historical parallels for him, and Cullen Bryant has an array, embracing Arnold and Rienzi, and even the sainted martyr of Bohemia, to whom to liken the prisoner at Charleston. This, to say the least of it, is premature, if not highly imprudent, and is a blazonry of their tactics which a vigilant enemy may take advantage of.

If old John Brown is executed, there will be thousands to dip their handkerchiefs in his blood; relics of the martyr will be paraded throughout the North; pilgrimages will be made to his grave, and we should not be surprised to hear of miracles wrought there, as at the tomb of Thomas à Becket. This blood of this martyr would be as seed to this fanatical church, and as that of Joe Smith to the church of Latter-Day Saints. It could be called in attestation of the purity of their faith; and Gov. Wise would be compared to Julian the apostate, or to Grahame of Claverhouse.

There is a fitness in this act of clemency in keeping with the spirit of the times. If an European despot, who maintains his position solely by the assistance of the Zouaves and the Turcos; with millions of discontented subjects impatient of his rule; with treason plotting at his palace gates, and himself surrounded by assassins as subtle as the Thugs of India—if such a man in such a position with a single dash of the pen can strike the chains from thousands of captives, and restore to their country and friends thousands of exiled sinners, many of them with abilities in comparison with which the mental endowments of Seward and Lincoln and Chase are as stupidity—if this can be done with the applause of half a universe, think of the shame which must rest upon the Commonwealth of Virginia with a million of seamen, themselves the sovereignty, and a quarter of a million of slaves held under patriarchal rule, whose loyalty under temptation is an astonishment to many who call themselves patriots; we say, think of the shame that must rest upon her, if her security demands and requires the blood of one old brave bad man.

The London journals report that the annual demand of penny postage stamps in Great Britain is little short of 500,000,000. Supposing the year to contain 300 working days, that would give for every working day about 1,600,000 stamps to be manufactured. Something, that, for the printer to do. No very impossible task, however, when we remember the small size of the stamp, and the number that might be printed by a single stroke of the press, or one revolution of a cylinder machine.

Judge Ranney, late Democratic candidate for Governor of Ohio, received more votes than ever was given for a Democrat in the State before—four hundred more than were cast for Mr. Buchanan in 1856; although the total vote of the State was thirteen thousand less than in 1856.

Frank P. Blair, Jr., of Missouri, has recently emancipated, in the Circuit Court of St. Louis, five of his slaves.

That is a bid of five thousand dollars for the Republican nomination for Vice President.

Money Matters.

It is surprising to see the difference a few hundred miles will make in the value of money. In Louisville we observe the utmost quiet in financial circles, with Eastern exchange dull at $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent., while in St. Louis exchange is scarce at 1 per cent., and such a stringency in money as to depress the value of real estate far below what it would have brought a few months ago. We notice a sale of a house and lot in one of the most desirable localities for the sum of \$32,500, which scarcely covers the cost of the building, while the lot itself, without the improvement, was valued at \$22,800. This comes of inflating the value of property on the part of speculators, and the general system of puffing that has obtained in that city for many years. Strangers are deceived by lying advertisements, and induced to invest their money, and only find out the imposition when compelled to sell. It is a species of drop-pigeon, but is considered more respectable than the game that consigns many small operators to the penitentiary.

The completion of the Nashville railroad is a most important event for the prosperity of Louisville. She has been outstripped for some years by the flash cities of the North and West; but her improvement has been solid, and the work of her own people and capital, while these other cities have been built up by eastern capitalists, and we regret to say, by not a few deluded people from our own State. If the money that has gone out of Kentucky to build vacant warehouses in Keokuk, Chicago, and other towns, had been expended in Louisville, it would have made a city equal to St. Louis, and would have secured to the owners a permanent and fair remuneration. Property is, however, rapidly appreciating in Louisville, and we know of no investment so likely to enrich the maker, as a speedy purchase of property in that city. Its railroad connections are now perfected with the whole Southern country—with New Orleans, Mobile, Charleston, Memphis, and every southern city of importance; and this is an advantage not possessed by any western city. It is the southern trade by tide-water that has contributed more than anything else to the prosperity of Boston, New York, Philadelphia, and Baltimore; and Louisville now stands in more immediate and rapid connection with it than any of these towns, and must prosper accordingly.

Cotton has already been received at Louisville over the Nashville road, and its manufacture there will soon become one of the leading branches of industry—the unlimited water power derived from the falls defying the more costly competition of steam.

Hogs remain in status quo. Mr. Macklin is paying $4 gross, and no better price is to be paid in Louisville or Cincinnati. The weather is too warm for slaughtering, but is admirable for fattening, and will doubtless contribute to an increased average in the weight of hogs, as also in the yield of lard.

By the arrival of the North America we have advices from Liverpool as late as the 26th, and the market reports are very favorable. Cotton, and also breadstuffs, have materially advanced, and at the close were very firm. This will be good news to the holders of grain; for upon a foreign demand is predicated the only hope of better prices.

The Government of Prussia is desirous to avail herself of the opening recently made by the Americans in China and Japan. It is now sending to the China seas an expedition, comprising three vessels, which carry a Counsellor of State with authority to conclude treaties with China, Japan, and Siam.

LOLA MONTEZ.—This celebrated woman is now residing in Brooklyn, New York. She is said to have experienced a change of heart, and lately to have lived the life of a devout Christian. Lola need neither play nor preach hereafter, as her English husband, at his death, bequeathed her an annuity of £500 as long as she lived.

The laws of Vermont prohibiting the traffic of intoxicating liquors, have become the settled and approved policy of the State. The Governor calls the attention of the Legislature to the subject of the establishment of a reformatory school for juvenile offenders.

The paintings and other works of art belonging to the late Lord Northwick were recently sold at auction. Although the son and heir reserved for his own use several hundred specimens, the collections sold yielded the pretty little sum of $450,000.

Marshall M. Smith, of Mississippi, has been appointed by the President, Consul to Constantinople.

Proclamation by the Governor.

COMMONWEALTH OF KENTUCKY,
Executive Department.

Another abundant harvest has been gathered; another year of multiplied blessings is at drawing to a close. The labors of the farmer, the mechanic, the manufacturer, and the merchant, the professional man and the man of science, have been abundantly rewarded; commerce has revived, trade has improved, and thrift is apparent everywhere throughout the land. Neither war nor pestilence nor mine has afflicted us. Peace, plenty, and health have blessed a free, prosperous, and happy people. Providence has showered His blessings upon us as individuals, as a State, as a nation. We should return to Him the homage of grateful hearts. In the eager pursuit of pleasure, of fortune, or of fame—in the excitement of our daily occupations—in the multifarious pursuits of life, we are too apt to forget Him from whom these bounties come. Knowing no sovereign but Him, let us recognize the venerable custom of the "Jewish east of Weeks appointed by Jehovah for his chosen people." For the establishment of, and preservation then, of our free institutions—for the preservation of our lives and health—for our tranquility, prosperity, and happiness—for our general thrift and the untold blessings we enjoy as a State and a people—

I, BERRIAH MAGOFFIN, Governor of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, do hereby appoint and set apart THURSDAY, the 24th day of November next, as a day of THANKSGIVING AND PRAISE TO ALMIGHTY GOD, and recommend its appropriate observance by all the citizens of the Commonwealth.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the Commonwealth to be affixed. Done at Frankfort, this 14th day of October, A. D. 1859, and in the sixteenth year of the Commonwealth.

By the Governor: B. MAGOFFIN.
Thos. B. Moore, Jr., Secretary of State.
By Jas. W. Tate, Asst. Secretary.

They have "nothing to wear"—and they wear it.

From Russia to Pekin.

A French traveler communicates to the North China Herald a rambling account of an overland trip from the Russian frontier to the city of Pekin, in China, which furnishes some interesting, though not altogether satisfactory information, concerning that region of country, and the great Chinese capital. The writer selected Kiakta, which lies due south from Lake Baikal, in Russia, for his point of departure, instead of Nertschinsk, some distance to the northeast, where the postal road from St. Petersburg terminates, but for what reason does not appear. From Kiakta to Urga, the capital of the Chinese province of Mongolia, and which is located near the northern border of that province, the country is very mountainous; from Urga to the frontier of China proper is a level, hard, sandy desert, without a drop of water or a house, but peopled by hospitable Mongols, who live in tents, furnish horses, camels, mutton, and water preserved in cisterns, and will divide all they have with the weary traveler. Here the cold in winter is terrific, the wind blowing in hurricanes, while during the short summer the heat is quite African, and the sand storms will tear the skin off and blind the traveler. Of the way thenceforward to the imperial city, and of the city itself, we have the following animated sketch:

At the frontier of China proper, 900 miles from Kiakta, the desert stops short in such an extraordinary manner as to make this one of the most remarkable spots on the earth. After a gradual ascent of 2,000 feet from Urga, it is suddenly broken like a cliff, facing the south; an immense amphitheatre of mountains, trees, rivers, and farm houses suddenly bursts upon the view, all bathed in sunlight, and smoking, as it were, with heat. At a great depth below, but yet twenty miles off and not yet visible, lies the great town of Clouan Hua-fou, called "Callan" by the Russians, and beyond it, bounding the horizon on the south, a four-fold range of precipitous mountains rise far into the air; the first range is of a chocolate color, the two next have a violet and scarlet hue, and the last, scarcely visible, and overhanging the plain of Pekin on the north, as of a light and hazy blue. Here, where we now stand, is a large wall, built of loose stones, and a kind of monument which marks the actual frontier of China, and this is most erroneously marked upon all maps as the "great wall," although the latter is one hundred miles further south, and is crossed at twenty-five miles from Pekin. From Callan to Pekin the country may be called a chaos of mountains, and wherever a house can stand, an agglomeration of towns, all surrounded by high walls, some of which have begun to yield under the weight of twenty centuries, and others have been buried to the top under the sand of the Mongolian desert.

After passing under the great wall, whence the view is truly magnificent, the road suddenly goes down into a deep narrow gorge all choked with huge blocks of granite fallen from the broken mountains above, and here the descent, for eight miles, is so precipitous that the Mongols themselves have to dismount. Five or six equally walls are now passed, and they might equally be called a wall of giants, for no matter what the slopes of the mountains may be, they rise from the bottom of steep precipices to their very summits, and are still fastened to them like so many serpents. When the traveler emerges from this gloomy defile, his heart must beat within him as he directs his eyes towards the great and mysterious city of Pekin; but there he will see nothing but a boundless plain of sand, with a few scattered farms, woods of cypress, little rivers, and not a patch of green, while every other point of the horizon is shut up by an unbroken and majestic range of blue and dreary peaks, rising like a barrier between two worlds, to the height of five thousand feet. However, as you approach the city, of which nothing at all can be seen until you have passed under its very wall, the buzzing, hissing, moaning of men, asses, women, camels, gongs, and birds of prey, of monster kites, and pigeons with melodious instruments attached to them, and carrying back to heaven the extravagant inspirations of Chinese musicians; in fact, all the noises and smells that come floating upon the wind over this great wall, as if all the animal creation were breathing within it, are things so strange to a traveler just arrived from Paris, that he cannot describe them. Once he has passed under the ponderous northern gate, measured the thickness of the stupendous wall, and is fairly in Pekin, he will be utterly bewildered; all before him is a confused and dusty mass of colors, men, mules, carts, hundreds of camels with the weary Mongols in their once red gown, enthroned and fast asleep on their highest summit; an immensity of wide, perfectly straight and endless streets; a living ocean of the most degraded beggars, of cooks, bakers, blind men beating upon kettledrums, crones delivering speeches, then, right and left, brilliant shops, cafes and hotels surrounded by long poles of all colors, wooden walls beautifully carved and gilt over; in fact it is a scene so unique in the world, that no dream could ever be so eccentric.

After traveling due south for four miles, leaving on the left the splendid Tein Tsin street and its noble gate, towering like another Babel in the misty horizon, and on the right the eastern wall of the Imperial city, shutting it out from profane eyes, but over which the Imperial hills, lakes, kiosques, temples and cedars may be seen at intervals, we come at length to the northern limit of the Chinese town.

Tobacco.—Tobacco boys will make tobacco men, with tobacco mouths and tobacco teeth, tobacco breaths, tobacco pockets, and a general tobacco smell. And what is worse, they will have tobacco appetites, which will crave tobacco enough in their lifetime to buy a small farm and raise a small family. They will moreover spit tobacco all along their way through life, to the annoyance of their neighbors, and the displeasure of their wives and families.

DEATH OF JUDGE BRIDGES.—Hon. John L. Bridges, of Danville, for many years the Judge of the Circuit Court of that district, died at his residence in Danville on Saturday, the 14th ultimo, after a protracted illness of paralysis. He was upwards of eighty years of age. Judge Bridges (the Danville Tribune says) had been for half a century at least identified with the legal business of Kentucky, and whether at the bar or upon the bench, enjoyed a high degree of popularity. As a Judge, there had been but few men who occupied a more exalted position in the esteem and confidence of the people.—Shelby News.

School-Room Etiquette.

Manners react upon the mind that produces them, just as they themselves are reacted upon by the dress in which they appear. It used to be a saying among the old-school gentlemen and ladies, that a courtly bow could not be made without a handsome stocking and slipper. Then there is a connection more sacred still between the manners and affections. They act magically upon the springs of feelings. They teach us love and hate, indifference and zeal. They are the ever-present sculpture gallery. The spinal cord is a telegraphic wire of an hundred ends. But whoever imagines legitimate manners can be taken up and laid aside, put on and off, for the moment, has missed their deepest law.—Doubtless there are artificial manners, but only in artificial persons. A French dancing master, a Monsieur Turveydrop, can manufacture a deportment for you, and you can wear it, but not till your mind has condescended to the Turveydrop level, and then the deportment only faithfully illustrates the character again.

A noble and attractive every-day bearing comes of goodness, of sincerity, of refinement, and these are bred in years, not moments. The principle that rules your life is the true posture-master. Sir Philip Sidney was the pattern to all England of a perfect gentleman, but then he was the hero that on the field of Zutphen pushed away the cup of cold water from his own fevered and parched lips, and held it out to the dying soldier at his side. If lofty sentiments habitually make their home in the heart, they will beget, not perhaps a fictitious and finical drawing-room etiquette, but the breeding of a genuine and more royal gentility, to which no simple, no young heart will refuse its homage. Children are not educated till they catch the charm that makes a gentleman or lady. A coarse and slovenly teacher, a vulgar and boorish presence, munching apples or chestnuts at a recitation like a squirrel, pocketing hands like a mummy, projecting his heels nearer the firmament than his skull, like a circus clown, and dispensing American saliva like a member of Congress, inflicts a wrong on the school-room, for which no scientific attainments are an offset. An educator that despises the resources hid in his personal carriage, deserves, on the principles of Swedenborg's retribution, similia similibus to be passed through a pandemonium of Congressional billiard.

Rev. F. T. Huntington.

[Correspondence of Philadelphia North American.] The President—His Habits—What he is About.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1. All the members of the Administration are now in the city, and preparing for the meeting of Congress. I am told the President moved from the Soldier's Home into the White House several weeks ago, for the convenience of his official duties, which he makes more laborious by personal attention to details than any, or indeed all, of the five Presidents who have figured upon the political stage during my period of observation here. Mr. Buchanan owes his distinction as a public man to perseverance, purpose, industry, and a well-regulated life, than to any remarkable native powers or original genius. His attainments are the results of constant and gradual accretion, obtained by patient investigation, and the advantages of long and useful experience in the legislative and diplomatic service, aside from his training and careful practice at the bar in early life, by which he acquired both fame and facilities of reference on foreign affairs, and taken in connection with a robust constitution, which has never been abused by enervating tastes, may account for the singular good health which he always enjoys, and the striking physical preservation which he exhibits at an advanced age. Methodical, precise, and exacting, he may be regarded as the model of a disciplinarian, both to his subordinates and to himself. The President breakfasts at 7 o'clock, reads his mail, skims the newspapers, and is at the Department of State by 8 o'clock every morning, at work upon the message, setting an example to the clerks of the circumscription office, which rather interferes with their accustomed ideas of dilatory hours and ease. He goes there for his daily work, he gives audience, attends cabinet meetings at the Executive office, and then takes dinner at a sensible hour, and a still earlier, and is home in the evening to receive company until 10 o'clock, when the curtain drops, and the expectants are dismissed. This is the daily routine, according to the accounts of familiars, and not much varied the year round, except by the higher pressure upon time and attention, and some unscrutable modification of habits, which Congress always brings with it. It is understood that the message will be short probably in the President's sense, since he is not much given to brevity.

Webster as a Man.

From an address by Edward Everett, entitled "Webster as a Man," we take the following extract, and commend its perusal to those who are always so ready to find defects in the characters of prominent men:

But some one may ask, is this bright picture, like the portraits of Queen Elizabeth, without a shade; were there no spots upon the disc of this sun? Was he not a man? Was he not a man? "That faultless monster which the world never saw," or did he partake the infirmities of our common humanity? Did this great intellectual, emotional and physical organization, amidst the strong action and reaction of its vast energies, its intense consciousness of power, its soaring aspirations, its hard struggles with fortune in early life, its vehement antagonisms of a later period, its exultation in triumph, the lassitude of exertion, did it never, under the urgent pressure of the interests, the passions, the exigencies of the hour, diverge in the slightest degree from the golden mean, in which cloistered philosophy places absolute moral perfection? To this question, which no one has a right to put but an angel, whose vision knows no mote or speck, to which no mortal can condescend, and of which the most scrutinizing hostility, personal and political, are like the spots on the sun, to which I have compared them, seen for the most part through telescopes that magnify a hundred, a thousand times; and second, that reference to questions that strongly excite the public mind, the imputed error as likely to be the side of the observer as of the observed. We learn from the Earl of Rosse, that the most difficult problem in practical science is to construct a lens which will not distort the body it reflects. The slightest aberration from the true curve of the specular mirror is enough to quench the fires of Sirius and break the club of Hercules. The motives and conduct, the principles and the characters of men buried deep in the heart, are not less likely to be mistaken than the lines and angles of material bodies. The uncharitableness of individuals and parties will sometimes confound a defect in the glass with a blemish in the object. A fly hatched from a maggot in our own brain creeps into the eye, and we are misled by its presence to think a monster in the heavens, which threatens to devour the sun.

Pacific Railroad.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—Senator Gwin will, at the earliest period of the next session of Congress, bring forth the Pacific railroad question with more than his usual energy.

[From the Albany Express.] Accident on the N. Y. Central Railroad.

An accident of a serious character occurred on the Central Railroad on Wednesday night between 11 and 12 o'clock. The locomotive "President," one of the most powerful belonging to the company, employed in drawing freight trains up the heavy grade to West Albany, and also bringing the men into the city, was derailed by a car in safety, and, returning to West Albany, ran on to forty-one more. After the night express had passed along, the "President" started for this city. Between 10 and 11 o'clock a slight rain occurred, which made the track very slippery. Soon after the train had got under headway, the engineer was satisfied he had a difficult task to perform in safely conducting a forty-one car freight train with freight down the heavy grade into the city. The whistle was blown to apply the brakes, and every one was put hard down. Notwithstanding this, the momentum of the train increased.

Before turning the curve just beyond Van Woert street, the rate of speed was fully twelve miles per hour, with all the brakes down. The whistle was blown to the first switchman and the track was all right. The second switchman supposing, as was the custom, that the train would stop, swung his light and proceeded to change the switch, so that the train would take the east track. He failed to accomplish this duty before the train came to the switch, and of course ran off the track, the locomotive striking first, plunging up the ground before it, and the freight cars piling up in indescribable confusion. Some of the cars, in their progress, struck the corner of the house occupied by Peter Fravor, and knocked down a portion of the front and side walls, creating great excitement in the house for a short time.

The locomotive, which was described by a person residing near the railroad track, was actually terrified. The locomotive whistle was screaming, and the cars piling up on each other and smashing to pieces, made such a noise as to startle the entire neighborhood. To add to the excitement, a hydrant being broken off by the locomotive, an immense body of water was thrown in the air, causing a young deluge from the street pipe.

The engineer, Mr. Wilson, who remained at his post, escaped without the least injury. So also did the firemen and brakemen. The locomotive was pretty badly smashed up, although Mr. Jones, the master mechanic of the company, thinks $1,000 will put it in running order again. Eight of the freight cars were literally smashed in pieces, and the contents (flour) scattered about in all directions. The balance of the train was badly damaged, every car being injured in some way or other. Their contents, however, escaped unharmful, so that the loss to the company on freight will not be very large. The total loss, it is supposed, will not exceed $5,000, and may fall considerably below that sum.

The Hopkinsville Press, in view of the great crowd that will probably assemble at the Democratic Convention on the 9th of January next, and of the difficulties that were caused by the want of time, want of accommodation, and want of arrangement at the convention which assembled in 1858, makes the following admirable suggestions. We trust they will be duly weighed and steps taken to make the business go off smoothly and with satisfaction:

Under the circumstances, we think, and without assuming the prerogative to advise, would respectfully suggest to the Central Committee, that in arranging for the next session, they proceed somewhat after the same plan adopted by the National Committees of Arrangements, in 1856, at Cincinnati, thus: Appoint subordinate committees of arrangements, reception, doorknockers, &c. Provide houses which will comfortably seat as many as possible in the audience chamber. Lay off and designate, in order, the ten Congressional Districts each separately, as near as may be; and then, the counties in those districts, with seats corresponding to the number of delegates each county may be entitled to under the rule. The city, and in the city, the free point place, the committee of reception should wait upon them severally and furnish to each member a ticket, provided they furnish no more tickets to any one county than it may be entitled to votes in the convention. Provide in the most convenient place, either lobbies or galleries, seats, tables, &c., for reporters. Furnish the press of the city with tickets, and if possible, have the visitors among them by alternation, if there be not room for all constantly. If, after this, there is room, then to distinguished visitors from States who may be present, &c., &c. By this arrangement, we believe the party following the State would obtain a fair hearing on the floor of the Convention, and the will of the majority be expressed and obeyed.

In conclusion, we would only say, that if the rules of the House of Representatives are to be considered the parliamentary basis of the next Convention, it would be proper to print and distribute among the various delegations, a sufficient number of copies to supply them with the information each may desire, and which will be necessary to a proper conduct of the business of the Convention. This would be but just, we think, and would certainly be more satisfactory than to adopt them without knowing what there is in them, as was done at the last Convention.

IMPORTANT DECISION.—The Supreme Court has reversed the finding of the District Court in the case of H. G. Angle & Co., of Cedar Rapids, against the Mississippi and Missouri Railroad. This was quite an important suit, involving $10,000, the amount claimed for boxes, 3 bales, and 3 barrels of goods, which the defendants refused to transport from Muscatine to Iowa City, at which place they were stored in the warehouse of Thompson & Co., and were destroyed by fire. The former trial resulted in favor of the Railroad Company. The Supreme Court reversed the decision. A legal friend makes the following abstract from the opinion, which is quite lengthy:

In the case of H. G. Angle & Co. vs. Mississippi and Missouri Railroad Co., the Supreme Court has decided that a receipt given by a Railroad Co. for goods delivered to them for transportation, describing the goods as "marked and numbered as in the margin," without further designation of the place to which they are to be transported, and in which the marks given in the margin consist of the name of the consignee, followed by that of a town, is prima facie a contract to transport the goods to the place designated in the margin. But it is competent for the company to show, in order to explain the contract, that the town to which the goods are directed is beyond the terminus of their road; and that it is not their usage to transport goods destined for that town further than their road extends.—Davenport Gazette.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—Capt. Lavellette, in a letter to the Secretary of the Navy, dated at Naples, Oct. 14, says that he had taken the American Consul, Mr. Nicholson, to Tunis, in the Washah, that it was customary to salute the English and French Consuls whenever they arrived or departed; but that no other such officers were similarly honored, but as our treaty with Tunis placed our Consul on a footing with the most favored nations, and this fact having been explained, the authorities cheerfully accorded the salute to both Capt. Lavellette and Capt. Nicholson. The carriages of the Bey were in waiting at the landing, where our officers were received by persons of the highest rank and escorted to the palace. The Bey, in a friendly way, expressed the belief that he should endeavor to cultivate the most friendly relations with the United States. Captain Lavellette adds, that he clearly discovered that our presence was having a beneficial effect on the new government, and especially with reference to the position of our Consul, and said he was convinced that the short trip to Tunis will conduce to the best interests of the United States.

[From the Philadelphia Bulletin, 31st October.] Sensible Fashions.

Notwithstanding the fact that it is a common practice to ridicule the hoops of the ladies, and to deride the ladies who wear them, we doubt whether there has ever been a period since the time that Adam and Eve put on their fig-leaf suits, that men and women dressed more sensibly than they do at present. The bonnets of the ladies, which seem to be made more with reference to the ornamentation of their back hair than to the protection of the head, is somewhat exceptional; while it must be conceded that there is some extravagance in the way of fashions, costly silks, and huge hoops. But tight-lacing is eschewed by all sensible women, street dresses are worn reasonably high in the neck, and a fashionable lady, with her warm undress, her thick shawl, cloak or mantle, and her stout boots and her gaudied hands, cuts a very different figure from the dull dressed dame of fifteen or twenty years ago, who would have been shocked to wear any thing more substantial than gossamer, who would scorn any foot-gear more effective than light slippers, and who would be horrified unless her form resembled that of a

Twenty years ago a gentleman would have been ashamed to appear in the street unless his limbs were incased in fine cassimere or broad-cloth; his overcoat, if he wore one, would be made of thin cloth, and the garment, like the rest of his clothing, would be so tight as to require that he should be constantly rubbing and rubbing before the getting it off would be accomplished. Dickens describes a tightly dressed individual in Martin Chuzzlewit, who, he said, resembled a cucurbit; and this stuffed appearance was peculiar to all the fashionable twenty years ago. Their pantaloons were as tight as they could be drawn on at all, and the fashion demanded that their shoulders should be drawn down to within an inch of their cassimere lives; coats with tight sleeves, narrow backs, and flat chests were in vogue, and broad-cloth was under a constant strain.

Garments are now worn loose and comfortable. The pantaloons of the present day do not impede the movements of the wearer; coats are sack-like in their dimensions; boots are wide, thick and comfortable, and without the ridiculously high heels which used to breed corns so bountifully; while overcoats are sufficiently capacious to be thrown off or on with perfect facility. There is as great a change in respect to materials as there is in regard to the cut of garments, and the change is for the better. The present day is not a day of thick woolen stuffs, the mere sight of which would have horrified a fashionable gentleman of the last generation.

The present fashions certainly secure the comfort of their followers, while the liability to take cold in winter is much lessened. We have also heard it remarked that the number of persons afflicted with dyspepsia has greatly diminished since the wearing of easy clothing became fashionable. This is the natural result of leaving the organs of the body free to perform their respective functions.

A Free-Love El Dorado.

The Free-Lovers finally can exclaim "Eureka." From a California paper we extract the following:

For some time past a free-love association has held meetings in this city and endeavored to gain proselytes, but with very little success. The association was presided over by a man who calls himself Dr. Tyler, an itinerant lecturer. After long struggling the doctor has found a disciple so deeply interested that he has sold a splendid farm in Contra Costa county and invested the money in the purchase of a tract of land in the republic of San Salvador, for which place the association sails to-day on the schooner San Diego.

One of the city papers adds the following particulars:

Our readers will doubtless remember, that several months ago, at a meeting of those of our citizens who believe in spiritual manifestations and agencies, the proceedings were considerably disturbed by a faction in the ranks of spiritualism who also believed in socialism and free-love, and a community of interests. A series of lectures were given at the time by Dr. Tyler in different parts of the city, and the split between the free-love spiritualists and those opposed to free-love was increased. Since that time we understand that the free-lovers have held frequent meetings, and they decided upon emigrating from California, and seeking some country where they could follow their own inclinations without bringing upon them the unrelenting opprobrium which would attend to the same names and persons if they remained here. Accordingly, an agent was dispatched to San Salvador, in South America, to buy the society a large tract whereon they could settle undisturbed.

The agent purchased from the San Salvadorian government a tract of some 50,000 acres of good arable land, to be delivered in half sections of $250 each, and we are not aware how many free-lovers there are in this society, but we learn that about twenty of them, together with Dr. Tyler, will sail for San Salvador to-day, in the schooner San Diego. We are also informed that one of that number is the same gentleman who recently sold a fine homestead in Alameda county to Governor Wells, for a very low price. It is said to be worth $40,000, all of which large sum of money he has thrown into the common fund for the equal benefit of all those belonging to the association.

The Toledo Blade says of the leader of the Free-Love party, who recently left California for Central America:

This Dr. Tyler we suppose to be the same person who figured so prominently as a Free-Love Apostle at Berlin Heights, some two years since, and was finally compelled to depart. He succeeded there in duping quite a number of individuals into the contribution of money to the support of his wild schemes, and was only stopped by the active and determined efforts of the citizens amidst whom he was seeking to spread his deluding dogmas.

The Tomb of Rachel.

The Hon. James Brooks, the senior editor of the New York Express, writes to that journal from the Holy Land:

Upon my return to Bethlehem, I rode by the tomb of Rachel—a small building with a whitened dome, and having within it a high oblong monument, built of brick and stuccoed over. The spot is wild and solitary, and not a tree spreads its shades where rests the beautiful mother of Israel. Christian, Jew, and Moslem all agree that this is just the spot where Rachel was buried, and all unite in honoring it. The Turks are anxious that their ashes may rest near hers, and hence their bodies have been strewn under the tombs all around the simple grave of Rachel. The sweet domestic virtues of the good wife have won their love and admiration, as the tomb of Absalom, near the brook of Kebron their detestation. Upon the latter they throw a stone to mark their horror of the disobedient, while around the former they wish, when they die, their bodies may be interred.

Nor is this wonderful. The wife, worth fourteen years' service as a shepherd, must have been worth having. The whole life of Rachel, is, indeed, one of the most touching in Biblical history. The sweet Shepherdess has left her mark upon the memory of man, as well as on her tomb. The tribute to her is the tribute to a good wife, and infidel, and Jew, and Christian all combine to pay it. The great women of the earth—the Zenobias and Cleopatras—have died, been buried, and their place of burial been forgotten; but to this day stands over the grave of Rachel, not the pillar Jacob set up, but a modern monument in its place, around which swarm pilgrims from every land under the sun, in respect and reverence for the faithful wife and good mother in Israel.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—As the chief, if not the only, difficulty in the way of the consummation of the pending treaty between the United States and Mexico is in relation to the proposed transit routes, industrial parties have submitted to both governments a basis of compromise, viz: whichever government may have any forces nearest any scenes of obstruction or disturbance, shall promptly interfere for the purpose of removing it, with the privilege of entering the Territory of its neighbor, and both, in a case of emergency, shall act unitarily. The assistance recently afforded by the Mexican troops from Matamoros to the people of Brownsville, is stated as an example. Such a proposition, however, to be incorporated in the treaty, must come from the Liberal government. This, it is understood, is favorably regarded by our own government.

There is no doubt that both the governments of Great Britain and the United States are decidedly opposed to the presentation of their respective positions or convictions as right, in relation to the San Juan question, though not more so than they were in the Oregon controversy, but the latest foreign official advices do not justify the apprehension of serious difficulties between the two countries.

Captain Payne, of the navy, is here, dangerously ill.

A SPICY LITTLER CASE—Miss DELIA WEBSTER AGAIN ON THE TAP.

An interesting case came off before Esquire Quinn day before yesterday, in which one Gustavus Nichols was plaintiff, and Enos Wiley defendant. Miss Delia Webster was signed an account against Wiley to Nichols, on which property has been attached. The defense set up against the claim of Nichols was that Wiley was not indebted to Miss Webster at the time of the assignment. H. W. Harrington was counsel for defense and James W. Tamm for plaintiff. The case was tried by a jury of six, who returned a verdict for plaintiff in the amount claimed, $67 50. The case was ably argued by counsel. Miss Harrington, who was employed by the defendant, clearly showed up the character and standing of Miss Delia, who is scarcely ever out of court. It seems to be her natural element to contend against some body or some thing. When she came out West she seems to have had an idea that she was coming among a set of wily rascals, who could easily be duped by a female who did not care anything about honor or an upright course in business transactions. Hence, as far as we can learn, she has taken all advantages that law and lawing could give her.

Madison (Ind.) Times.

Post-prandial speeches have had their day in some parts of Europe, and we are glad of it. When well done, they are boring; when not happily delivered, mischievous. As we draw our fashions from France, let us imitate the Marquis de La Roche, who, at the dinner of the Agricultural Society of Ille (France) said: "I will not propose a toast. Toasts, with their accompanying addresses, are an importation from England; they are stiff and starchy, are indigestible like fatty food, and, like fatty food, are indigestible like fatty food, and, like fatty food, are indigestible like fatty food."

The Law of Virginia. RICHMOND, Nov. 7.—It is asserted that under the laws of Virginia the Governor cannot pardon a person convicted of treason to the Commonwealth, except with the consent of the General Assembly, declared by joint resolution. This reads like a responsibility in the matter; what the Legislature will do is not known.

New Orleans Election.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 7.—The elections to-day have been perfectly quiet. In the Fourth district the Democrats have elected one legislator, one justice, and one State tax collector. In the rest of the city the regular American ticket was elected by a large majority.

Arrest of an Insurrectionist.

MEMPHIS, Nov. 8.—A man named W. R. Palmer, who is charged with being concerned in the insurrection at Harper's Ferry, was arrested here to-day on a requisition from Governor Wise, of Virginia.

COUNSEL FOR BROWN.

Ossawatimie Brown again a lawyer to plead. And he looks to the North—but all vainly, indeed! They who kindly abstain from first from his blaze; and our "free love" are not aware how many free-lovers there are in this society, but we learn that about twenty of them, together with Dr. Tyler, will sail for San Salvador to-day, in the schooner San Diego. We are also informed that one of that number is the same gentleman who recently sold a fine homestead in Alameda county to Governor Wells, for a very low price. It is said to be worth $40,000, all of which large sum of money he has thrown into the common fund for the equal benefit of all those belonging to the association.

LEONARD SCOTT & CO.'S
British Reviews,
AND Blackwood's Magazine.

L. SCOTT & CO., NEW YORK, continue to publish the following leading British Periodicals, viz:
1. The London Quarterly (Conservative).
2. The Edinburgh Review (Whig).
3. The North British Review (Free Church).
4. The Westminster Review (Liberal).
5. Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine (Tory).

THESE Periodicals all represent the three great political parties of Great Britain—Whig, Tory, and Radical—but politics forms only one feature of their character. As organs of the most profound writers on Science, Literature, Morals, and Religion, they stand as they ever have stood, unrivalled in the world of letters, being considered indispensable to the scholar and the professional man, while to the intelligent reader of every class they furnish a more correct and satisfactory record of the current literature of the day, than any other review publication can possibly obtain from any other source.

EARLY COPIES.
The receipt of Advance Sheets from the British publishers give additional value to these Periodicals, inasmuch as they are placed in the hands of subscribers about as soon as the original editions.

Postage.—In the principal Cities and Towns, these works will be delivered, FREE OF POSTAGE. When sent by mail, the postage to any part of the United States will be added. Twenty-four Cents a year for "Blackwood" and but Fourteen Cents a year for each of the Reviews.

OUR REPRINTS VERSUS ECLECTICS, &c.
As we have for many years been paying more than $30,000 annually to the British Publishers for the material furnished in these Periodicals, this virtually being a constant drain upon our funds, we have determined to publish our own Reprints, and give to the preference over Eclectics and over other publications, whether monthly, or weekly, will now extract so liberally from our works and pay nothing either to the British Publishers or to the Eclectics publishers, subscribers are not obliged to be guided by others in the choice of the articles they may desire to read. Moreover, taking into account the extra work which our Reprints are published and their acknowledged fidelity to the original editions, and also the advantage of an entirely new series of works, we are confident that our series will be found as cheap as any of the competing publications to which we have alluded.

Remittances should always be addressed, post paid, to the Publishers, LEONARD SCOTT & CO., Jan 28 & wtf No. 54, Gold Street, New York.

A Specific for Hooping-Cough.
It is known by a few individuals in the counties of Jefferson, Shelby, and Oldham, that I have a remedy that effectually cures Hooping-Cough. If there be any in America or Europe that cures, it is not within my knowledge, (except the one I use.) Physicians tell the families they attend it can't be cured. I have no doubt they are candid in what they say. To get the medicine in use, and to sleep a deep-rooted prejudice, the faculty are invited to get the medicine and see the little innocents whom they attend, and tell me no more it cannot be cured. One dollar will pay for two bottles, which is a sufficient quantity for any family. The medicine can be conveyed to any part of the United States by express for a mere trifle. THE VESPER GAS
OR AIR LIGHT,
The Cheapest, most Brilliant, and most Convenient Artificial Light in the World!

THE Vesper Gas Light is well known for its reputation for elegance, economy, safety, and simplicity far beyond any other artificial light. The Vesper Gas fixture and fixtures resemble in form those of coal gas; but in brilliancy and purity of light, it possesses a decided advantage over even Louisville coal gas. It requires no chimney; there is no need of daily kindling of wood, and the construction of the fixture is so simple that it is not a task to get out of order, and a child can manage it readily. The Vesper Gas fixture is portable, and can be used in town or country—in fact, wherever artificial light is required. The fixture is adapted in style to suit
